

NOISE ASSESSMENTS

Have you done a noise assessment in the last five years?

There is a requirement for employers to assess employees' exposure to noise, where the employees may be exposed to noise levels greater than the allowable exposure standard of 85dB(A) Leq8hr.

ERGOSH consultants are able to conduct noise assessments in compliance with the Occupational Health and Safety Regulations 2007 and in accordance with AS/NZS 1269.1:1998. An ERGOSH consultant will identify and assess tasks and areas that exceed the noise exposure standard. In addition, the consultant will prepare a noise management plan that will give practical advice on how to control the exposure of employees to noise in the workplace.

If required ERGOSH can also provide training to inform and instruct employees on the health effects associated with exposure to noise and the selection, use and fit of hearing protectors.
